Area Summary

Bredfield is a village and civil parish that sits two miles north of Woodbridge in Suffolk Coastal.

The community is relatively small but thriving, with a good number of community assets. The village hall has an attached village shop which is run by a local voluntary organisation. This sits alongside a substantial playing field and park area.

The parish benefits from two active churches which includes the traditional St Andrew's church and a smaller chapel that is sometimes used as a meeting venue.

The parish recently acquired a piece of land that has been dubbed the 'Jubilee Meadow' which now includes a community orchard.

The village did have a local pub but it was closed at the time of writing.
